Chickens and Bees Begins in Northglenn City Now Accepting Applications

Northglenn, CO – On May 24, Kevin Burgess, left, and Brad Bowen, right, were the first Northglenn residents to sign up for licenses to have chickens in their yards. May 24 was the first day that residents could turn in an application to possess chickens or bees in a residential area, after City Council passed three ordinances at the May 9 meeting.

The licenses cost $25, but never have to be renewed.

To see the guidelines and applications for chickens or bees, go to www.northglenn.org/chickens.
